

THE PARAGON SOUL

Teachers engage with learners to allow their understanding and application of knowledge, concepts, and processes. Teachers can see the changes they affect. They have a strong impact to their learners. They can see their work if it is in failure or in fruition. If they discern that someone is lacking, they will analyze and make certain actions such as different activities and remedial after class hours. No matter what the targets are, they are focused and determined to accomplish the task allocated to them.

Some people considered teaching as one of the most stressful occupations. Why? It is because of lots of responsibilities assigned to them. Teachers are one of the busiest persons. Aside from teaching, making lesson plan, accomplishing different kinds of reports, they used to be nurses, maids, carpenters and the like while inside their classrooms. Although standing in front of the classroom is a big part of teacher's responsibilities, they extend far beyond that into the lives of their learners, families, and their communities. Because of these, the burnout levels of teachers are relatively high. But despite of the over duties, they still manage to do all of them. Their door is open to all. They are willing to extend their hand to give service to those in need. They are never worn out to accomplished things they must.

Honored, respected, and loved by all their learners and fellow teachers, they are indeed the paragon soul of a great teacher.
