

AFRO-ASIAN LITERATURE: ITS SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON LEARNING

by:

Orlando I. Pragas

Teacher I, St. Francis National High School

Engaging oneself in a world of literature is absolutely an excellent experience because it will bring you to a realm where impossible things become possible. It will expose you to a different place where you will encounter various norms and practices. Also, you will discover multiple characters that have other behaviors and attitudes. Indeed, literature, throughout the world, is rich in its content and elements to the extent that you will know the different cultures of other countries and their way of living.

Many people in this humanity are not fond of reading different texts, short stories, poems, and novels. However, as you indulge in language and literature, you will learn how to grasp and embrace the enormous part. It will give you and other readers a profound idea and knowledge of the essential elements that need to be retained as human and life-long learners in this world.

Based on the article by Kenny Andrew (2019), Afro-Asian literature is a carrier of the culture of the people in a society. In line with this, it tries to present and visualize their traditions, values, challenges, hardships, and viewpoints in life. Afro-Asian literature significantly affects learners and other readers to the extent that it helps them, and the writers are exposed to the different writing styles and techniques of African and Asian writers. They could also find out if there were similarities and differences in their way of life.

Moreover, we could also discover the historical origin of the literary works written by famous writers in Africa and Asia. It helps us to open our eyes widely to their rich culture. The African and Asian literature helps us unveil the unique writings of their works, their language, and how it is being translated and developed up to this era.

Indeed, Afro-Asian literature is a one-of-a-kind course that the learners must consider. It contains profound knowledge and ideas that will change your mindset and perspective. Afro-Asian literature brings humanity into the realm of writings and different works where you will learn to value and accept it.

References:

Andrews, Kenny (2019) African literature. Retrieved May 28, 2020 from <https://www.quora.com/What-are-the-characteristics-of-African-literature>