

TEACHERS REALLY MATTER

A crucial factor in a nation's development is education. A society's future can be created through educating its children. Teachers offer the education that raises standard of living, benefiting both individuals and society at large greatly.

The contribution of teachers to our society can never be underestimated. They are pillars of our community. Have you ever wondered what life would be like without great teachers? Helen Caldicott once said, "Teachers, I believe, are the most responsible and important members of society because their professional efforts affect the fate of the earth." Teachers are widely regarded as one of the most significant influences on the development of a nation's future people. You might say, without teachers, there would be no doctors, lawyers, engineers, police, neither you nor me.

As most people think, being a teacher is not an easy job. In the school, teachers take care of learners like a parent takes care of his or her children. Teachers should not only teach the intellectual development but also the other welfare of the student in the emotional, social, moral-spiritual and physical aspects that they should possess as a person. They turn days into nights in preparing the lessons to be taught the next day. They have no desire but to impart knowledge to the learners.

In reality, teaching is the most significant profession there is. People with influence over society's youth have the capacity to transform lives - not only for the lives of the learners, but for everyone's lives. Teachers are considered as the world's noblest workers - the people who created and shaped every profession. KUDOS to all the TEACHERS in the world!
