How can someone without education know anything? How can you say that someone is educated? Does it mean that you have to get a degree for you to consider as educated?

In today's world, we are talking about things that hinder children in their learning. Many say that children are very different than they used to be. Values are a crucial component of how education responds to many of the complex problems it faces.

Over the years, everything seems to have changed. With the advent of modern technologies, it seems that the behavior of young people is changing and worse, moral principles and standards are nearly disappearing in this generation. The best remedy for this is values education. Educators must give emphasis that education does not always take place within the boundaries of the classroom but instead must be applied in the daily lives of the learners.

Like what Martin Luther King Jr. has said, "Intelligence plus character-that is the goal of true education." Education must not only focus in imparting academic skills but also build or develop the values of the learners. Values development enable the learners grow into people with strong character. Hence, it also helps the learners to become well-rounded and holistic individuals.

Clearly, values development is essential to education. Thus, educators must practice values-based education to equip and develop the learners into successful individuals, future leaders and extraordinary people who can change the world.
