

THE VALUE OF WORK ETHICS IN THE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

by:
Lily Grace F. Santos
Teacher III

In the real-life working scenario, a diversified variety of workers such as teachers, facilitators, and other workers working in the area of Education subside. Ethical principles, values, philosophies are given when you start working with them, various protocols and instructions need to be followed and implemented. This work ethics is being used to create a better working environment and relationship between its educators and organization. Work ethics serves as a guideline and basis to avoid mistakes, misunderstanding, and chaos in the working place. A resilient work ethic is an essential part of being successful in your career. Work ethic is a set of values based on the ideals of discipline and hard work. Building a solid work ethic will allow a person to train themselves so that hard work is almost automatic.

As stated in the Professional code for teachers or educators, TEACHERS should model strong character traits, such as determination, morality, respect, lawfulness, patience, fairness, concern, and unity. As a teacher, we MUST treat every student with kindness, equality, and respect, without showing discrimination, prejudice, or partiality. This working code serves us as their guides and basis for implementing good work ethics and imposing a good image within their working place. The code of ethics for teachers and educators is executed and designed to protect the students' rights and conduct proper behavior and ethical infestation. For example, you can't accept lavish gifts from students because it might influence you on becoming bias. You can't push your own beliefs on students because they are a "captive audience."

Ethics serve as a guide to ethical daily living and helps us judge whether our behavior can be reasonable. Ethics refers to society's sense of the precise way of living our daily lives. It does this by launching rules, principles, and values on which we can base our conduct. Its value and usage should be understood, implemented, and followed because it is a rule on ethical consideration and protocol in working conditions. It is also believed that a school or any home of an education system that is perceived to act ethically by employing appropriate work conditions and ethics can realize positive benefits and improved education system outcomes. The perception of ethical behavior can increase the teachers' performance, job satisfaction, organizational commitment, trust, and organizational citizenship behaviors. It just implies that work ethics play a vital role. It can influence how well we do our job in working at our workplace, how well we can perform our tasks and responsibilities, and how we will act in front of our facilitators, learners, and co-workers.

Workplace ethics is also integral in nurturing increased efficiency and teamwork among your personnel. It helps in supporting the values of your business with those of your workers. Work ethics affects many factors within the working environment, so it is imperative to understand, to be manifested in our daily life and use this as a guide to better perform as a dignified and role model educator.

References:

Professional Code of Ethics for Teachers | Career Trend.

<https://careertrend.com/about-6639418-professional-code-ethics-teachers.html>

What are the five principles of ethics?.

<https://findanyanswer.com/what-are-the-five-principles-of-ethics>

The Benefits and Importance of Ethics in the Workplace.

<https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/benefits-importance-ethics-workplace-larry-ventimiglio>