Nowadays the children are simply confined at home to protect themselves from the existing pandemic in the country. This is one of the reasons why home-based education is implemented at present. This new normal became predominant for the schoolchildren so they may continue learning at home.

These are the advantages of home-based education that we need to highlight, most especially now that they are studying at home. Home-based education is both economical for the parent and child. This does not require the parent and child to spend any amount for their "baon" which they usually spend during the face-to-face classes.

The convenience is evident in home-based education. The child enjoys the comfort and safety of his or her house. Traveling was restricted for safety. No long trips or walking for those who are living in the far-flung areas.

It is more enjoyable to study at home because they are surrounded by their loved ones whom they may interact with. Also, having equipment in the house which is useful for learning like television, radio or computer may bring fun to the children at home.

In terms of assistance, the child that is being surrounded by responsible parents and relatives may easily avail assistance to help him or her in the lessons and in dealing with more challenging tasks. Families are truly the support system to build the confidence of the child.

The strong bond between the parent and child may be established and maintained in home-based education. Since the parent is always there to aid his or her child, their relationship will be cemented strongly and their bond will make firm.

Home-based education provides a flexible schedule and may be changed depending on the needs of the child. The schedule is not for leniency but opportunities for the child to learn more in an inviting environment. It ensures that the child is safe and does not suffer emotionally. This is to protect the child or learner from any form of hazard and bad influences that others may bring. This makes certain that the child will grow with enough virtues and respect for others. Home-based education is an option for the parent and child to be closer as a family.
