As one of the open services, education must not only be valued by society and individuals, but it must also be advanced and secured, and covered. Both community members, partners, and educational institutions are typically responsible for this. Every community places a high priority on education for their children. Families either have the power to seize influence and use it for the benefit of their children's education, or outsiders manipulate and rule the vulnerable and exploit them even more.

The majority of educators around the world continue to believe that community engagement is critical to enhancing instruction quality and quantity, and that community collaboration and strengthening have the potential to make a significant contribution to teaching individuals and improving their quality of life.

Education is, in essence, at the core of peace, restoration, and country-building efforts. If this is the case, the act of diving into instruction is a helpful lever. It is an act of improving people's ability and capacity to act in a way that benefits them, their society, and the rest of creation directly and indirectly. This implies a personal and national responsibility to participate actively in the educational process. As a result, society plays an important role in the improvement of the educational system.
