According to a certain study; education is a crucial human virtue. It is believed to be the foundation of a decent existence, for it is included in multiple societal standards that allows an individual to receive great benefits, and open greater opportunities in life. That being said, education truly is an essential attainment in human life. It allows humans to live a richer life, but unfortunately nowadays it is treated poorly, and also being taken for granted.

Education can contribute a huge change to someone's life, likewise determines one's future. There are plenty of evidences how education changed a person's life, and how it affects development of a country. Education does not only gives useful knowledge and skills but it also molds an individual to be the person he or she needs to be in order to achieve his or her ambitions in life.

Sadly, studies have stated that the education crisis in the Philippines is more visible in the institutions accessed by the majority of students. Underfunded public, and government schools most often struggle with situations such as lack of classrooms, materials, and teachers which disenables them to sustain quality education and deprives their students of the learning that they deserve.

Moreover, studies also indicate that most Filipinos under the poverty line are those who have little to no access to education, for it under qualifies them to society's standards of a decent earning job. In conclusion, those who lack the means for education; lack the means of sustaining a comfortable life. Therefore, such a factor should, without a doubt, be accessible to every individual, and not just to those that can afford it.
