Along the way we encounter learners in school who are considered gifted for having extra ordinary characteristics. Though they are already inclined in learning in various things in school, appropriate attention should be bestowed upon them.

It is also necessary to discover their traits for the teachers to handle them greatly.

A gifted learner has high level of intensity in terms of the passion to study. This kind of learner has the intense drive to learn and acquire more knowledge and skills which are contributory to his holistic growth.

This kind of individual really finds enjoyment in learning and learns quickly. This kind of learner enjoys the course of learning. He also learns rapidly thus easily acquiring all the knowledge and competencies.

A gifted learner has that profoundness in terms of the perception of things. He sees things in depth and is able to extract the essence of things for better understanding of ideas.

This kind of learner is a keen observer and has a sharp memory. He sees the most distinct details and is able to absorb significant information that are essential in every learning area.

A gifted learner uses language articulately and process thought intelligently. The manner of speaking is indeed admirable and the diction is truly remarkable which commands power and intelligence.

The gifted person has the potential to choose from different options. He sees the different angles and possibilities and choose the best preference in doing things in the class and other matters.

This kind of learner uses creativity in doing things. He is not only contented on simplicity but rather do things in artistic means, thus yielding better outputs in the accomplishments of a certain task.

The gifted learner resolves problems accurately. He employs the right steps and methods in doing things, studies the consequences and even searches for the best solutions in order to make the right decisions.

We need to be familiarized with these traits in order for us to fully understand and guide the gifted ones who are treasures in the school and will become assets of the society as well.
