

LEARNING CURSIVE HANDWRITING

by:

Alvin M. Santiago

Teacher III, Antonio G. Llamas Elementary School

Why do our beginners need to learn cursive? Learning to put in writing and reading are the maximum significance skills that our learners want to learn. Reading and writing can be looked at as fundamental skills in the classroom, however their use stays essential lengthy after one's formal schooling comes to an end. Living within the virtual age has made literacy even extra important, as communicating professionally through writing is an important (and assumed!) skill in most workplaces. There are infinite benefits to having strong writing skills, the advantage of teaching students these skills from an early age are mostly on academic achievement throughout the curriculum. Study after take a look indicates that students who are capable of mastering writing skills early on struggle much less in overall literacy and communicating. After understanding the basic writing, the subsequent step is to realize a way to write in cursive writing mainly in Grade 4, Grade five and Grade 6 learners.

Cursive writing can increase children's fine motor skills or have completely focus on pencil grip whilst forming cursive letters. Cursive handwriting is beneficial for children that are dyslexic because it is easier for them to read it. Cursive additionally helps for children with spatial orientation or children learn the distinction among right, left, down, up quicker the usage of cursive. It additionally improves concentration, hand-eye coordination, speed, neatness and increases the inventive facet of the children. We must recollect as a teacher that we need to teach this skill that is sometimes left out in this day due to the fact cursive is significant a, a part and not a waste of time to teach.

References:

https://twitter.com/thisha_omuhle/status/1561759121921261569?t=AGUmdwL4bLO

mhm-

nMDcKGg&s=19&fbclid=IwAR1Zt3GnrNqd9kzzSA8Goss75lj3jsxjJtc65P3Rcwh7LUVvq

0CIWA48Shw