

LIFE AS A KINDERGARTEN TEACHER

Teacher I, Lucanin Elementary School

The initial stage of a child's education is kindergarten. During this time, the kid starts to learn the fundamentals of numeracy, listening, speaking, writing, and reading. It serves as the basis for their knowledge. It's enjoyable and really difficult, I can say that as a kindergarten teacher.

I enjoy teaching at this point in a child's development a lot, perhaps because I adore working with kids. I observed the child's gradual development in kindergarten. The children's perseverance and drive to learn, despite their first struggles, particularly with writing, were other traits I observed in them

I welcome the students who have come with their parents to class to start the day as a teacher. On the first day of school, some of the students nearly refused to enter our classroom. The youngster could feel ashamed, but I help him or her understand that there is nothing to be ashamed of because everyone welcomes and accepts everyone.

In kindergarten, there are also certain days when the kids I hold have different attitude. There are the sobbing, sulking, mischievous children. I have to maintain my composure and tolerance because, to me, teaching is a calling that demands tolerance, kindness, and love for this line of work.

The tabula rasa theory of John Locke states that a mind is like a blank piece of paper waiting to be filled with information and experience. Teaching in kindergarten is similar to this situation. In order to handle the following stage of their study, I as a teacher need to acquire the necessary skills of my pupils to help them develop their potentials.

In kindergarten, I gained some important knowledge. I should not teach for a living however I should do this because it is the right thing to do so that my pupil will benefit. Also, I need to have a heart. As a teacher, I have to keep in mind that what matters is not how much we have taken, but rather how much we have given. We should care for the love in our profession and in our students.
