Parents are considered as significant persons in every educational institution. Though they don't spend most of their time in school, their mere presence is important and noted.

The collaboration between the school and parent is significant in the learner's education. Building a partnership to provide the learner with quality education and guidance is very advantageous.

Creating a good relationship between the school and parent would help to provide an optimal learning location for the schoolchildren. Since both the school and parent know the best for the learners, for sure the provision of the best learning environment is greatly possible.

When the school and parent are united a certain support system is created that will aid the learners in their academic pursuits and in dealing with the challenges in school. The learners would feel that they are not alone and they feel they have people to guide them.

The school-parent collaboration can improve communication in the school on matters about the schoolchildren. The partnership between the school and parent can augment the sharing ideas, plans and concerns for the welfare of the schoolchildren.

Both the school and parent can gain the insights from each other. Both have different views but a common goal. When these perspectives are consolidated, better insights are formulated.

Trust and positive relationship are established whenever there is a school-parent collaboration. If there is an open line of communication, the support that the learners need may be easily provided.

The regular communication and collaboration between the school and parent may better know how the schoolchildren learn and may readily intervene on the difficulties and problems of learners.

With the school-parent collaboration, the educational goals set for the education of the schoolchildren may be successfully attained because both parties are working out for the said goals.

The collaboration between the school and parent serves as a strong bond that keep them in order to lead and guide our dear educational clientele...the learners.
