

THE MANY ROLES OF A TEACHER

by:

Josielyn Boqueo

Teacher I, Jose C. Payumo Jr. Memorial High School

A teacher's role is not confined to the four walls of the classroom. The continuous progression to all the areas in school, more so in the community, embodies active involvement in beneficial undertakings. Teaching in the four corners of the classroom is not only his/her life, but a teacher must reach out to other people, share one's talent and ability, and lead them to their development and productivity. It is expected from a teacher that they spend time collaborating with other people on their ideas and strengths to achieve a common goal.

Being involved in programs, projects, and activities of the school that promote the welfare and well-being & the educational clientele is much more rewarding. Moreover, a well-versed teacher, and a flexible one, will be admired and respected by students. A teacher must be seen in the community as well. Having been exposed to various community activities is a good indication that the teacher is an active member of the school community. It may be a clean-up drive, tree planting, anti-smoking campaign, waste management, and others are possible valuable projects a teacher may deal with. In addition, he/she can serve as a speaker or adviser in various conferences or gatherings where the wit and wisdom of a teacher would be required.

Consequently, as an educator, you must establish an excellent rapport and harmony with the learners and the school community members. Most especially 'is essential for a teacher to treat others with love, care, compassion, and respect. As a result, this will help him establish interpersonal relations with them, and it would be easier to work with them for a common purpose or goal. In the classroom setting, every child must see and feel the good interpersonal intelligence of his/her (teacher to sense a pleasant and inviting classroom ambiance to be yielded by the teacher with a great smile and genuine care. Interpersonal relation that is good, particularly in education, can create a better impact and impression on the learners, parents, and the rest of the stakeholders. t. this way, they would feel the teacher's warmth in dealing with everybody in the everyday matters and concerns." A teacher who relates well with others will be rewarded with respect and admiration for the attitude being projected is pleasing and desirable. It is an open truth that a person can win the heart of people if he/she knows how to deal well with others regardless of gender, age, or status in life. It will be reflected that an educator must try to emphasize the value of brotherhood and camaraderie in various conversations and communications that will require a solid connection to achieving a common purpose. A teacher should be a model of interpersonal intelligence and skill.

References:

Loughram, J. and Hamilton, M.L. (2016). International Handbook of Teacher Education (Vol 1). Retrieved from: <https://link.springer.com/book/10.1007/978-981-10-0366-0>