Indeed, the most alarming phrase that a leader would say is “we’ve always done it this way.” A mirror of a stagnant leadership – no growth.

As time goes by, the strategies and techniques of a leader must develop. The world is changing, so as the people and their needs. One must not live by his timeworn way or style, with this, he should know how to adapt and how to recognize the change.

At this point, the Department of Education is facing a crucial condition to continue and pursue education. The pandemic hit not just the people but the system of the world, a state which everyone created and generated remedies and solutions to keep going.

The word innovation now is the stepping stone of the leaders, and school managers. Modes were implemented to run on and continue education at all cost. This reflects how creative and innovative the Department is, for learning modalities and learning strategies was introduced beforehand. This is the challenge everyone is facing right now. A sense of creative mind is needed for this to manifest and partake. A lot of leaders will be thinking of new possibilities that will be bringing benefits to the new normal we are facing.

Indeed, if no one carries change and innovation, we will be stuck with the limited, narrow, and constrained ideas. We will not be able to endure this situation if no creativity will be implemented. As school leaders, it will be a big gun to the current situation as it will be your bullet to success.

If no one tried to modify their ways and styles, there is a big possibility that up until now, people are still stuck in the fear of moving on. Great leaders are great innovators. Ready to foster change and to make things happen.
