

GENUINELY YOU!

Have you ever tried having an idol? Wherein every single move and words he say inspires you? We may not all remember the days we are taking our first baby steps, learning how to walk, and eventually how to run, but throughout the process, we are mimicking someone on their actions we would also want to do. We also once played “Follow the Leader” and tried our very best to copy every act the leader would do or say.

Throughout the learning process, you are imitating someone’s action which is usual as a child. But as we mature, we just don’t simply copy one’s action but rationalize if those actions could also benefit us in the long run. We carefully think of what are the possible pros and cons of those actions we are going to make.

We are all genuinely made by God, and each of us have our own unique characteristics and abilities, which can make us excel in our own chosen field. To fully utilize our own abilities not only for our benefit, but also for the organization we are in. In order for us to utilize these given abilities, we should have self-awareness – no one truly knows yourself but you!

Later on, we must learn how to enrich these abilities. Our world is fast changing, and we might end up broke if we don’t adjust to the life changes we are facing. Like the old saying goes, “The only permanent thing in this world is change”. That our God is the only One who never changes. And our challenge now is how to deal with all the change using the genuine characteristics we have moulded. Who would have thought that dealing with these changes might be beneficial in enriching the genuine abilities we have.
