A good leader is also a good follower. The question here is, how can someone be a good leader? First and foremost, he needs to know the risk and responsibility of being one. Being a leader is not just a piece of cake, it is a task that should be taken by someone seriously. There are things that need to understand, apply and consider.

If you are a good leader, rest assured that you will have good followers. A good leader leads, a good follower follows. It is a mutual understanding between a leader and a follower. But is not as simple as that. You will never gain respect from your followers if you are not a good leader, a leader with a heart for that matter. YOU ARE NOT A BOSS. Your follower will not be happy to be bossed around.

There are lots of leadership examples that we can observe and learn from the insects and animals. They have a good and bad traits of a leader, as well as a follower. Let's go learn from them. The Queen's ant and bee leadership examples, as their leader, it empowers a good leadership skill to protect its kingdom and territory. In this leadership example, the Queen is the one always guarded and protected by her followers. Hard work and sacrifice are the main thing in their hearts and minds. All followers are willing to die to save the life of their Queen. The king Lion and Rooster leadership examples, always on the frontline willing to fight and protect his territory and his followers. Wherever he goes his followers follow his lead. His voice are in high pitch needed to be heard by his followers. He is very generous and gentlemen to females and most of all his followers are afraid on him. The Apes and Wolf leadership examples, this is the kind of leadership that actually promotes competition. If anybody in your followers see your weaknesses they will do anything to take his throne. Most of the time, the followers are on the frontline and the leader is at the last, so he can see and protect all his followers from the back. They are always in high alert and vigilant to his followers and outside forces. Leader as well as his followers are willing to kill and die in order to protect each other.

Which leadership examples you are willing to copy? Or in which example do you see yourself?
