The social rights activist, politician, and philanthropist Nelson Mandela said, "Education is the most powerful weapon that you can use to change the world". A degree today serves many purposes than just getting a job. It is the means by which you will develop your capabilities, skills, career and personal growth.

Aside from this, we must remember that humans are the only species with the power of thinking. Humans have been evolving for millions of years, traveling a lengthy path to get to the point where we are now. Lack of education would have prevented people from reaching this level of achievement. The Latin word "Educare," which meaning to train or mold, is the source of the English word "education." It is a more comprehensive concept that begins in the womb and lasts till the grave rather than just being thought of as bookish knowledge and the capacity to read and write. It is the most crucial instrument and the one that can help you succeed the greatest in all of your goals. Additionally, it aids in the formation of a distinctive way of viewing life and is crucial in bringing about positive social change. The more options that become available to you as a result of your increased knowledge will give you better chances for both personal and professional development. Without education, it is impossible to meet life's problems in the highly developed and competitive modern world of today.

Education comes after the four basic necessities of food, housing, water, and clothing because without it, we cannot advance in social standing and become civilized members of society. It is essential to success because it enables the community to forge a unified culture and set of values, which enables it to flourish both socially and economically.
