For the past two years, students had been studying through their cellphones/gadgets, and modules in which was provided by the school. Lot of students had rough times learning during those years. And now, recently, Department of Education announced that face to face classes will return soon.

Today, it has been 3 weeks since the face-to-face classes came back last August 22, 2022. Now, the question here is who are the most excited to this? The parents? The students? Or the Teachers? For me, the most excited in returning of the face-to-face classes are teachers and the students. Finally, they can meet their friends, laugh with them, bond and socialize with each other. You can feel the genuine happiness of the students whenever they come to school to learn, there is no more distraction since they can finally focus on class and listen to me as I teach them new things. I can also feel that students feel less pressure now compared to when they are in their home, studying alone with their parents. I think the return of face-to-face classes has a positive effect to both parents and children, and teachers. Parents can now focus on earning money for their living, while students focus on learning in the school. Teachers can now monitor if their students are learning.

On the other hand, parents are much happier that their children can finally learn in an in person although they still feel their fear that their children might caught diseases such as the Corona Virus 19. Parents know all about these and yet, they send their sons and daughters to school to learn something that they can use for their future. The cost of school supplies and other things that are needed by the students may be a problem, but parents are doing their best to earn and keep up with the financial needs of their children for education because they know that it is for the benefit of the students.

Teachers are very flexible, they can do their job both modular, and face-to-face classes. Excited always for parting knowledge to their students since they can assess, monitor, and guide their students so they can learn best.

The Department of Education provide the needs of the students and teacher to ensure that education works best to both learner and teachers.
