It's been a decade since technology change our life. From ways of cooking, cleaning the house, washing our laundry and even in our ways of learning. Different gadgets arise today that every glimpse of minute it upgrading the unit. There is new technology introduced just as if they are changing clothes every day.

Gadgets are still accessible only to a few people around the world especially for those who lives in an average to high-rank lifestyle. Computers are still extravagance. Yet many schools chalk and blackboard are still used as the standard tools for teaching while other schools have interactive program facilities.

It will take years or decades before modern technology gadgets become reachable to everyone especially for the low-income sector.

The questions are if these gadgets are envisioned to make life easier or just desire consumer to be mere consumers, discontented with what they've already have.

But with our situation today as we live in pandemic era, technology used to be a luxury, but now, it is necessity especially to the learners who have dreams and have a right to gain knowledge as part of the government responsibilities to their countrymen.

The education system has undertaken a paradigm shift from where it used to stand years ago. In the older days, students had to visit to the public library and open big books to find the information they desired. In the 20th century, one would find thousands of results for the same things they need – in just a portion of a second. The technology has actually improved, and continues to advance.

How vital is technology to the education?

Technology must be used to participate students to grip love of learning novelty things.

I appreciate technology, educators can modify learning for learners. It allows them to expand their teaching methods and monogram learning, thus increasing their output and effectiveness as teachers.

And lastly, these tools sweeping doors of learning probabilities for them for uncharted topics in their classes.

There is no uncertainty that gadgets has become a necessity today. Every being rich or poor needs it. Its practicality is immense and limitless advantages.
