

“STORY OF LIFE”

by:
Ashley Danielle M. Ancheta

Every day, we play our role in what is written for us, which we call life. In each chapter, stories are performed in different tones, languages, and genres. For instance, a child who lost his toy at seven now lost his faith at seventeen. A mother who binds herself to care now becomes careless. A father who vowed to be present is now tangled with a mistress. And lastly, a sister whose smile is endearing, but all just a facade.

Each chapter shows versions of you, rushing to get your morning coffee brewed to running away from your wake. Or you are getting that work done, chasing vivid dreams just to have a taste of hope. Endlessly running around in circles, echoes in a loop, just for a moment of hope. When the season changes, leaves flow in different warm tones, and the home smells like the burnt croissant we used to bake at the end of July. Where somehow a distant smile creeps in me when you take the shot of an almost emptied alcohol in a can. We drove by the hills to watch the painted sky dance in different hues, and it was magical. Regardless of what version of you shows in the mirror today, this story will live long.

It is a story of a person who chose to seek the meaning of faith again. No matter how we keep on patching up wounds and holding ourselves from bleeding, we stayed afoot. We took chances on chances, even if people surrounding us already loses the word. A person whose selfless but never take things for granted. And promised to love oneself, for a soul. Lastly, a person who turns every page an adventurous one, for the hope that will never fade.
