

THE PUPIL: MOST IMPORTANT PART OF THE EDUCATIVE PROCESS

by:

Edna R. Beltran

Teacher II Saguing Elementary School

The pupil is the center of the educative process. He is an integral part of the teaching and learning processes. He learns under the supervision of a teacher or an instructor. In this sense, pupil is under the care of an adult that will help and support him in everything he needs particularly in the school.

A pupil should value hard work for better grades, discipline, punctuality, teamwork, unity and the like. He should strive hard to become a successful and good individual. And so, schooling is a period that shapes him to become a great human being and prepares him to face the upcoming challenges of life with courage and strength, focus and survival.

A pupil plays a crucial and active role in education especially in school. He involves and interacts with other pupils and teacher or instructor, participates in classroom discussions and performs the activities given by the teacher. Pupils should develop excellent communication skills so that his social status and social skills will be enhanced.

In addition, being friendly and polite in everything he does will boost his self-confidence and self-esteem. The pupil's attainment and achievements are based on his performance in the classroom. When a pupil is not making any progress in the classroom or is falling behind, then he should be given additional support and be provided with extra activities catch up with the lessons.

On the part of the teacher, she always finds time for the pupils who are left behind and gives them much importance in teaching and learning. Pupils by then should always study hard and enjoy the school's activities so that they will learn how to manage a complex, changeable and uncertain situation they may encounter in the lives.

References:

https://www.educatenepal.com/article_archive/display/student-life