

WHEN HOME STANDS OUT!

by:

Caezy K. Mendoza

Teacher I, Old San Jose Elementary School

“Home is a safe haven and a comfort zone”. A place to live with our families and enjoy with buddies. A place to make memories as well as to make future wealth. A place where we can truly just be ourselves. In times of pandemic this description of home reversal. When all places closed, such as seminaries, malls, supermarkets, and private and public realities, nothing was allowed to come out from their sanctum except for the medical labor force, police officers, barangay officers, or the so-called front liners. To secure the learners and each family member from COVID- 19 contagion, the home stands out and shields us from contagious conditions. Like a basement, home defended us from the inconspicuous adversary. Fighting for our life is a must-have as knowledge must not stop. The schools might be closed, but education will always find a way to serve our learners. Self-Learning modules, online classes, composite knowledge, and coterminous, asynchronous classes are some of the modalities we use to give safe knowledge.

Homeschooling arises, and learning facilitators take over to continue the knowledge at home. instructors still have all their tails, enduring all the reviews. Patiently reaching all the learners and facilitators through all means. They have no way to stop allowing different ways to contribute to and support analogous homeschooling. They give all the necessary paraphernalia, direct each facilitator, motivate learners, and make academe in every home. Really, there is no place like home.

Changes are endless goods in this world, so prepare to embrace all the necessary or indeed the gratuitous goods that might cross our way. The learnings that we will gain will help us to be stronger and further knowledgeable as well. Let us all be vigilant no matter what or who we are.

References:

https://www.google.com/search?q=HOME&rlz=1C1CHBF_

https://www.who.int/health-topics/coronavirus#tab=tab_1