

LEARNING CHALLENGES AMONG TEACHERS

by:
Irene Mariel L. Magno

One thing that is needed in teaching is helping the children be taught by their teachers. This is one of the most identified teaching skills among teachers. This may come with difficulties, and it may become complicated as the students vary in their generations as well as to how they can achieve the development of the learning objective every day.

The learning challenges among the students do not just end with the capabilities of the teachers to handle their behaviors and difficult times. It is more to that. The learning challenges come in the more crucial stage as the students are mixed into the pandemic state as well as to the varieties of strategies and lessons which must be appropriate for their current generation and current interest. This is not an easy task for the teachers, since the current state of the students is sandwiched between the ties of having such limited face-to-face and the availability of internet connections.

With this, what may be the suggested framework for the learning challenges among the students and the teachers who are aspiring to give more quality services towards their precious students.

This is a list of the learning challenges top up with the suggested strategy for the teachers.

Behavior Issues. Some students may be so hard to handle as they came from different families, different cultures, and different orientations. The suggestion? Try to let them be assessed first by the experts in the school before judging them and coming up with a certain punishment or verdict. Try to give everyone a chance and the benefit of the doubt always.

Tardiness. Most students may find it hard to bring back their circadian rhythm again after the pandemic and the online setup. The solution? Give them time to adjust, do not dwell on getting mad at the first three months of the learning tasks. You may give more patience to them even if it takes a year or so Parental Attachment. Some students are mostly attached to their parents, of course, since they had to be with them for almost three years in a quarantined situation. The suggestion? Adjust a little bit every day and tell them in a subtle manner that they will enjoy their stay in the school. Moreover, assure them and their parents, safety as much as possible and with all honesty. Try to ask the help of the institution with this.

References:

University of the British of Columbia.(2022). Learning Challenges.

<https://learningcommons.ubc.ca/tutoring-and-advice/learning-challenges/>