

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL: GOOD TRAITS AS A SUPERVISING HEAD

by:

JEFERSON JOHN P. BASTO

OIC- HEAD TEACHER, STA. ELENA ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

The school principal is the institution's headmaster or the person in charge of specific tasks. Organizational development and design are among the works of the principal. The creation of learning opportunities for students and teachers is also a part of it. The transition of an organization from where it is to where it needs to be included change management. He sets a vision of academic success for students. Also, managing people, data, and processes, improving school leadership, and cultivating leadership to others. But before the school principal acquire all these things and to create strong relationships with his staff members and learners, the supervising principal must exhibit several characteristics.

Some of the good traits of a school head are as follows:

- Able to establish and share a vision of academic success.
- Encouraging cooperation and collaboration among teachers, staff, and students.
- Developing leadership skills in school staff and creating new leaders
- Helping teachers and students reach their fullest potential through continuous learning opportunities.
- Having high knowledge in giving instructional supervision

It is desirable to run a school with compassion rather than only with authority. It fosters a climate that is healthy for the school's principal, teachers, and learners. Additionally, it fosters a good relationship with the parents and others in the community.

References:

https://www.google.com/search?q=definition+of+school+principal&rlz=1C1CHBF_enPH981PH981&oq=definition+of+school+principal&aqs=chrome..69i57j69i60.5428j0j15&sourceid=chrome&ie=UTF-8