As life continuously evolves, life necessities change. This also affects how we communicate in our day-to-day lives. Language barrier does exist for centuries, and as technology develops this barrier becomes more and more evident. We may easily connect with each other through technology yet are still distant from one another.

Why am I stating these? What's the correlation of these statements? Simple. As different races grew closer together, it is imperative that we know how to understand each other. But it isn't that easy. Different races, means different languages. This creates a huge misunderstanding with one another.

How do we solve this? One great solution would be, to have an official language. Here enters the English Language, English is one of the most widely spoken languages in the world. As per last April 20, 2022, English is currently spoken by over 1.35 billion people around the world. However, not all 1.35 billion speak English as their native language. But this number shows, this is one of the languages that we can easily teach and understand.

Learning English usually starts at home, but is enhanced in school. Having said this it is now a necessity, especially in a country that wants to be globally competitive, to learn a language that most of the people understand. It also helps them prepare to be a great asset for any company they wanted to be a part of in the future. Also, as a country who's known to be very hospitable with foreigners, we have to at least know the basics on how we can reach out to them and make their stay the best experience ever.

With this, English language is now a new necessity of communication, and life. It is important that we as educators make sure that we can help our student reach their full capacity in speaking the language.
