May Charlotte G. Pantaleon

Are you alone in this? Definitely NO! You need someone to contribute to the team. But the question is, why do you want to run for officer? First, you must want it. By doing so, you will enable yourself to overcome your limitations and help not only yourself but also your fellow students and classmates, in addition to the teachers in your beloved school, by giving the best of your knowledge and strength.

Many students aspire to gain an achievement that is beneficial not only for them and other officers but also to the rest of their classmates and fellow students. It comes from the deepest desire to improve the skills, or so-called abilities, to learn how to fix or handle complicated situations the school might currently be facing. And finally, to be part of a better chance that will improve and benefit the school and the future.

This involvement will develop skills in the leadership arena, which will surely aid us in the coming years as we face the real world. This will not be an easy job, and it's a big responsibility to take, but one must believe that with the knowledge, help, and cooperation of everyone around, one will be able to perform the job. Attending leadership training is a great tool and provides a great opportunity to learn amazing things like leadership skills, communication, teamwork, organization, and public speaking. You must consider it!

With all the knowledge and training, you must have a high belief in yourself – that you are perfectly fit for the position because you possess the qualities of a student leader and/or officer. You must be ready to take part in this prestigious role. You must be a person who is goal-oriented, a good listener, and a communicator with the willingness to serve others, who is hardworking, and most importantly, a good friend who never stops believing in yourself. Lastly, you must have the heart to care for other fellow students and come up with an idea for how to make everyone happy.

Once you have made up your mind after checking your eligibility, go and start planning your campaign.
