

ATTAINING BETTER STUDENT ENGAGEMENT

by:

Rosalie L. Aguhar

Teacher II, Gugo Elementary School

When the situations changed due to the world plague, things altered in the field of education. Several notions, strategies, innovations and modalities were introduced in order to adapt and adjust to the needs of the people and of time but the bottom line of all of these is to promote better student engagement.

Introduce inspiring stories. One of the effective ways on attaining better student engagement is through telling the pupils with stories that are inspirational and stimulating. In this way the teacher is able to motivate them on the essence of each story and this leads them to be more engaged in listening and in watching more meaningful literary masterpieces.

Conduct educational games in the classroom. It would not only be zestful but at the same time educational when a teacher integrates games in a lesson that is being discussed in the classroom. These educational games are not only for fun but they kindle the critical thinking and rouse the psychomotor abilities of the learners during the time of action.

Lead them in role playing. The staging of dramas or plays in the classroom invites more students' participation. It even inspires the learners of the characters they need to assume in class role playing or dramatization. This also makes them feel that they belong in the group and their individual presence is vital.

Let them sing and dance as performance tasks. The pupils enjoy most in singing and dancing. Teachers must give them the opportunities to showcase their distinct talents for them to feel that they are recognized and well-accepted for what they are.

Hold a recital. There are pupils who have exceptional talents in musical instruments. Let them perform in a recital form so that they may share their talents and boost their self-confidence. Class recitals provide a room for these young kids to increase engagement.

Have collaborative work. Normally, group work in the classroom entails collaborative efforts from the pupils or students. Collaboration promotes better student engagement because every member of the group is given the chance to participate and share one's thoughts or ideas.

Utilize technology in teaching. The catch and appeal of technology to pupils or students are truly apparent. Integrating technology in teaching would not only be pleasing but at the same time educational. Students or pupils would certainly involve more on learning with the help of technology.

Let them assume roles and responsibilities. The students or pupils like to be trusted and be given responsibilities in the classroom. We could gain better student engagement when these pupils assume roles to perform.

By means of these activities and undertakings the teachers would win the heart and attention of the students thus making them more engaged in school and in learning. Thus, students' participation in the classroom would continue to spark.

References:

What are the best practices to improve student engagement?

<https://www.classcraft.com/blog/best-practices-to-improve-student-engagement/>

5 Tips for Better Student Engagement. <https://www.leaderinme.org/blog/5-tips-for-better-student-engagement/>

Tips and Strategies to Boost Student Engagement.
<https://www.common sense.org/education/articles/tips-and-strategies-to-boost-student-engagement>