

EMPOWERING FAMILIES: STRATEGIES FOR SUPPORTING ELEMENTARY STUDENT LEARNING AT HOME

by:

Jayvie R. Ablazo

Teacher I, Camachile Elementary School

The participation of parents and families in the education of elementary students is essential for the students' academic achievement. Parents and families have a vital role in supplying assistance, direction, and resources to help students reach their maximum potential.

One of the most important ways parents and families can support elementary student learning is by being involved in their education. This can include attending parent-teacher conferences, volunteering in the classroom, and staying informed about their child's progress and academic needs. By being actively involved in their child's education, parents and families can help to ensure that their child is on track to meet their learning goals.

Another important way parents and families can support elementary student learning is by providing a safe and supportive learning environment at home. This can include creating a designated study space, setting regular homework and study times, and providing access to educational resources such as books and educational websites. Additionally, parents and families can help to foster a love of learning by encouraging reading and other activities that promote curiosity and critical thinking.

Parents and families can also support elementary student learning by setting high expectations for their child's education. This means encouraging children to work hard, set goals and strive for success. By setting high expectations and holding children accountable for their learning, parents and families can help to motivate students to do their best.

It is also important for parents and families to support their child's emotional and social development. This can include providing a positive and supportive home environment, encouraging healthy relationships and helping children to develop problem-solving and critical thinking skills. By supporting their child's emotional and social development, parents and families can help to ensure that their child is able to succeed academically and socially.

Finally, parents and families can support elementary student learning by staying informed about school policies and programs, as well as staying in touch with school staff. This can include attending homeroom meetings and participating in school projects and programs. This will motivate students to do the same, thus leading to academic success.

References:

Waterford.org (2022 July 7). How family engagement lead to student success.
<https://www.waterford.org/education/how-parent-involvement-leads-to-student-success/>