The topic laid so many meaning to a mere sheet of paper.

When one talks about the heart of a teacher, we are actually looking at the deep spring of water, or a waterfalls; a sea of tides or an ocean of waves. What is the heart of a teacher, and what made it works? Is there an end to its love for the students?

Teachers vow to the mission and vision of the school they were in. There are many means and ways in which a school may define its ideology, but teachers remain, in general, a group of people that continues their profession beyond professionalism. They dedicated their life for the pursuit of quality education for the building of dreams of their students. In the movie entitled 'Every Child Is Special' by Amir Khan, the heart of a teacher is seen very clearly.

It is a heart that is ready to sacrifice time, talent, and treasure. For the sake of one student who has lost his interest in every subjects, the teacher made him feel okay and boost his potentials to the extent that a champion bears the student's name at the end. There are also students, on the other hand, that are not 'regular' and special care is needed for them to be trained. Teachers must be patient enough to deal with it.

The heart of a teacher is impossibly comprehensible when it comes to the students. But one thing is true: teachers love their students beyond what reason may give.
