It is truly a pleasure to educate young people with young minds because they are the ones who have an intense eagerness to acquire knowledge, competencies, and wisdom. As developing individuals, these learners are willing to listen and study which is why they deserve quality of instruction from their teachers, advisers, and mentors.

Teachers should provide standard instructions. The teachers are expected to bestow the students with the best knowledge, information, and competencies they owe to acquire during their learning process in the school. Teachers should show more attention to students. The ample time to be spent with the students would surely cover all the necessary skills they deserve to have, in their journey to development and growth and in the attainment of quality in education that they receive.

The teachers should not only teach but at the same time hone the students. Honing has a deeper touch in every student's life, particularly in school. It is the process of improving, enhancing, polishing, and refining one's craft, intelligence, talent and skill. With honing, we produce quality students. The teachers should also mold the learners. This means that the teachers are anticipated to shape one's character and individuality. The teachers who ardently shape the learners are able to instill within the educational clientele.

The teachers also guide the students. Leading the students to their proper path or direction would certainly make them attain their respective inclinations and would intensify their abilities and talents. If this happens, they will surely be able to execute quality in their respective undertakings. The teachers lead the student to advancement. This pertains to the way how the students are being introduced to modern and innovative means in their studies. It is leading them to technological breakthroughs and to the updates on current trends and innovations. Thus, quality is searched.

The teachers serve as models. As true educators, the teachers emanate outstanding traits and attributes that are dearly exemplary and admired. The quality of personality that we project may influence our learners. When the teachers can follow the aforementioned notions, the attainment of quality in educating the learners would be feasible, possible, and practical.
