Classroom management is an important factor that makes teaching and learning achievable in the education process, thus all teachers must learn proactive classroom management to prevent the occurrence of problem behavior and to established an evidenced-based practices to improve academic behavior. It also aims to have solid contingency plans in place to improve classroom situations. It is also based on organizing the classroom in ways that create a positive physical and emotional environment. Proactive educators establish practices, lessons and disciplinary approaches that educate learners self-discipline.

So, as to have a proactive classroom teachers need to act in advance during a given situation and used a well-planned approach in imposing a discipline, they also need to serve as model in showing ideal behavior. It is also important to let the students help in establishing guidelines inside the school and classroom and document it. Teachers should avoid corporal punishments that would cause problems on their part. Instead, they need to encourage initiative, offer praises to kids, and make them feel they are loved and accepted.

Proactive classroom operation is one of the finest forms of classroom operation styles because it's nearly associated with applicable pupil manners. It also allows educators to be one step closer to being a largely effective advisor for the learners that they served.
