As a student, there are certain things that we look for in our teachers. These qualities can be the difference between a successful and enjoyable learning experience, and a frustrating and unproductive one. Here are some of the things that students want on their teachers:

First and foremost, students want teachers who are knowledgeable. We want teachers who are experts in their subject matter and can answer our questions with ease. This not only helps us learn the material better, but it also inspires confidence in our teacher and makes us more eager to learn.

Secondly, students want teachers who are approachable. We want teachers who are friendly, understanding, and easy to talk to. This helps us feel comfortable asking questions or seeking help when we need it. Approachable teachers also tend to create a more positive and inclusive learning environment, which benefits everyone.

Thirdly, students want teachers who are organized. We want teachers who have a clear plan for the class and can communicate it effectively. This helps us understand what we need to do to succeed in the class and reduces stress and confusion. An organized teacher also tends to be more efficient and productive, which benefits everyone.

Fourthly, students want teachers who are engaging. We want teachers who can make the material interesting and relevant to our lives. This helps us stay focused and motivated, and it also makes learning more enjoyable. Engaging teachers also tend to be more memorable, which can help us retain the information better.

In conclusion, students want teachers who are knowledgeable, approachable, organized, and engaging. These qualities can make all the difference in our learning experience, and we appreciate teachers who possess them. As teachers, it's important to keep these things in mind and strive to be the best we can be for our students.
