“A man without education is like a building without foundation.”

Education is a weapon to improve one’s life. It provides important knowledge, skills, and cultural norm values that can help individuals to live in a smooth and developing country. Providing education to everyone will surely contribute to the development of society and can be a reason to remove poverty in a country, where many people are facing nowadays. Through education, individuals gain the knowledge and skills necessary to challenge societal norms, question authority, and advocate for positive change. Hence, education helps in creating a better society.

Functionalists believe that education equips people to perform different functional roles in society. It acts as the “backbone” of a society where people realize the importance of education to find better solutions to certain problems because lack of education gives numerous problems not only for an individual but for the society. Educated people think of a better solution with a better technique that encourages them to become innovative and creative in every aspect of their lives. With this, people know how to deal with different types of problems that can also develop good moral values and become good human beings in the society they live in.

In addition, education empowers individuals to understand, appreciate, and contribute to their cultural heritage while also fostering a global perspective. It becomes a bridge between tradition and progress, allowing societies to adapt without losing their unique identities. Recognizing and harnessing the power of education becomes imperative for building a future marked by knowledge, equality, and collective prosperity.

Thus, as an individual, it is our responsibility to give back to the society we live in to make it a productive and better place for everyone. We can conclude that education for everyone matters for us as individuals and for the society we live in.
