Guidance serves as a tool in maintaining discipline inside the classroom. Here are few reasons why guidance is important:

1. Classroom Standards: Guidance helps set clear norms and standards for behavior in the classroom. When the rules and regulations are familiar to the learners, it becomes easier for them to follow. Less excuses will be justified when they commit mistakes.

2. Positive Encouragement: Guidance provides positive encouragement for pleasant behavior. By appreciating and praising learners' efforts to maintain discipline, it encourages them to continue displaying desirable manners.

3. Individual Attention: Effective guidance allows teachers to pay particular attention to learners who may be experiencing disciplinary issues. By meeting their needs and attending any underlying concerns, accepting everyone's uniqueness, teachers can help guide them towards more desirable behavior.

4. Conflict Resolution: Homeroom guidance helps pupils develop skills in resolving their own conflict. Teachers can guide learners in navigating conflicts and arguments and finding harmonious solutions, promoting a positive and mannerly classroom environment.

5. Mutual Respect: Through proper guidance, teachers can encourage mutual respect among themselves and their learners. By exhibiting respectful behavior and nurturing learners with dignity; by treating other people with respect and recognizing their good value, teachers can develop an atmosphere of trust, love and unity.

6. Self-discipline: Guidance helps children promote self-discipline. By providing careful guidance on appropriate behavior and the consequences of their misbehaviors, youngsters learn to better understanding of himself leading to satisfying adjustments and improved classroom discipline.

Summarizing them, guidance in the classroom is significant for maintaining discipline by setting classroom standards, implementing positive encouragement, addressing individual needs, guiding conflict resolution, promoting mutual respect, and fostering self-discipline.
