

PROMOTING INITIATIVE AMONG LEARNERS

by:

DIANA E. RUBIANO

Teacher II, Samal National High School Annex

The professionals of the present generation were truly honed by the academicians and education experts in the past. One of the greatest learning that they gained from the key persons who shaped their educational achievements is to bear initiative in quest for productivity and excellence.

Tell the learners the value of intrinsic motivation in school. The teacher has a great impact to influence the learners regarding initiative. It is better to cite the advantages and the core of initiative in school.

Let them follow a certain goal. It will be good if the learners know the goal of the school and even that of the class. When the goal is learned, the student would be able to align his or her own objective as manifestation of an initiative.

Motivate them to make use of the intelligence and skills. The teacher can make a difference among learners when he or she stimulates them to make use of their capabilities. The learners would certainly move towards an initiative when being motivated by a teacher.

Establish a group work. Learners may tend to create something new or better when paired or combined with others. Group work would certainly be efficient and effective in achieving goals.

Have them work independently. The teacher must trust the learners to work in their own volition. This would permit them to think and act independently to attain a certain objective in school.

Inspire and maintain student participation. The teacher should keep on inspiring and maintaining the participation of the student in the class. This will yield active and proactive learners who would have the earnest eagerness to grow and be productive.

Let them discover new things. The quest for new things must be turned over to learners. This means that the learners may discover things in their own ways. When given the freedom to find out new concepts or things then initiative is developed.

Provide learners with opportunities. There are many tasks in the school that the teachers may entrust to their learners. Having the opportunities to do things and to grow would precisely develop one's intrinsic motivation.

Promoting initiative among learners is indeed advantageous and beneficial to them, for them to become more responsible and more productive in school.

References:

How to Teach Initiative to High School Students.

<https://www.icevonline.com/blog/how-to-teach-initiative-high-school>

Encouraging Initiative in the Classroom with Anonymous Feedback.

https://link.springer.com/chapter/10.1007/978-3-642-23774-4_49