

OF ALL THE LOVE IN THE WORLD

by:

Robert D. Oliveros

Teacher III, Pagalangang National High School

Teachers, amidst the pandemic and other unavoidable circumstances, are one of the best representations of love, and passion, and the best at decision-making. They are also best at controlling their behaviors even when stressed and have personal struggles to attend to. They can turn the negative atmosphere into a pleasant feeling of comfort. There is no doubt that there were teachers featured in the news articles showing outstanding deeds and inspiring fellow men – teachers who are actually from zero yet a hero. They show love and passion towards quality service, quality education, and quality deeds. They are the most loved among all other professions in the eyes of the students especially those students who had been taken care of their special needs and those learners who were given the chance to become a great influencer as well.

Teachers elicit positive energy and love in the classroom, guide the students with all their hearts, and drive these students' ignition and spark to express what they can do and what they can do more. They are considered to be the heroes who save the lives of every learner pulling them out of ignorance, cruelty, and inequality they might have.

Teachers are one of the few who remain committed amid the pandemic, they continue to serve the nation in terms of delivering instruction to the best they can. They are the ones who would seek first the welfare of their students, willing to sacrifice their pocket, time, and energy just to fulfill the needs of every learner.

Of all the love in the world, teaching might be a profession; however, the fruit of its labor cannot equate to any amount of money. To see the students walking towards and through success is what truly pays off.

References:

Vilson, J. (2015). Less Is More: The Value of a Teacher's Time.
<https://www.edutopia.org/blog/value-of-a- teachers-time-jose-vilson/>. Retrieved on June 2022.