The importance of leadership and management in a school is fundamental. There has been an excellent advantage in educational leadership in the past years. This is for the reason that of the common belief that the quality of leadership makes a significant difference to school and student outcomes.

In other countries, including South Africa, there is acknowledgement that schools oblige effective leaders and managers if they can provide the best possible education for their learners. As a competitive department, more governments are realizing that their main resources are their people and that remaining, or becoming, competitive depends progressively on the development of highly skilled employees. This involves trained and committed teachers and needs the leadership of highly effective principals and the support of others.

The field of educational leadership and management is vigorous, together with many competitive and an inevitable lack of agreement on the exact nature of the discipline. The manner of determining the aims of the administration is at the heart of educational management. Therefore, a part of the progress of a school depends on the capabilities and effort of good leadership and his/her managerial skills.
