The true rainbow in a person's personality is not always easy to see.

What is the LGBT community's rainbow world? Some people cope with the fact that there are significant differences between the worlds of the past and present. It covers a wide range of aspects, including conduct, attire, customs, and, most importantly, gender identity.

As one of those who will prove that people in the rainbow world are joyful and full of laughter, being an educator is a significant job to play in our community and adhere to, yet one of the most difficult things to do as an educator is to identify as a member of the LGBT community. There will be a lot of people who criticize your personality around you. We'll keep evaluating both your personal and professional abilities as educators. I wonder all the time if my gender prevents me from being a classroom teacher. What they say about my personality – can I take it?

Rainbow teachers make classrooms happy. As more laws pertaining to everyone's equality are passed over time, The different talents that LGBT teachers have to offer are visible to everybody. I can see and feel that they are exhausted from being students all day. My pupils become more engaged anytime I offer them an opportunity to chuckle at my jokes. It can be difficult to be an LGBT teacher, but we can prove to everyone that we are not alone in society.

Like me, everyone in society is a beautiful rainbow. We have hands eager to assist and share our talent and expertise, and a heart ready to love our kids.

Having numerous opportunities that offer all DepEd educators equal rights is encouraging. Teachers who identify as LGBT have a voice because the ultimate objective of GAD seminars and trainings is to create an equal society in which to live, not to push personal boundaries. Let's continue appreciating the colorful rainbow of LGBT educators. Their capacity to teach as LGBT educators will not be determined by what's between their thighs.

For still valuing educators like me, members of the rainbow organization with vibrant colors. Our place in society is something we both become and maintain a part of. Many members of the third gender group persist in advocating for their skills and abilities. The goal of LGBT educators is to uplift younger kids and instruct them on how to live a morally upright existence. It makes no difference what gender we are when it comes to our capacity to teach the kids in the classroom. We may not appear normal to others, but we have always understood that our purpose in life is to be compassionate educators for our pupils.

All teachers in the LGBT community are extremely appreciative of DepEd for providing them with the free chance to participate in their pupils' education. In order to make every classroom more cheerful and vibrant, we hope that DepEd will keep its doors open to educators of different gender preferences. We'll keep fighting for kids in every school and be an inspiration of hope permanently. We shall all still stand as Mom, Dad, Sister, and Brother in the classroom, regardless of gender. The rainbow group's teachers have created a lively and colorful classroom. We have a significant impact on both society and education. We won't be accepted for dressing like women, applying makeup, or acting feminine. Regardless of our sexual orientation or position on the rainbow, the role we play in the classroom will have a significant positive social impact.
