There it was, walking with its chubby paws, striding ever so elegant towards its half-empty bowl of food. It sniffs around it, examining the contents that seemed to appear invisible after its own eyes. After a moment of thorough analysis, it screamed endlessly, waiting for its bipedal companion to notice its agony, to fill what needed to be filled, to quench the hunger, and to provide what is being required. The bipedal companion, now seemingly irritated yet amused by the cries of agony, do the unspeakable yet flawless technique of shaking the bowl, it is as if a miracle were thrown into the bowl, and it was filled again with food. Now it eats.

If that was not the best description of the scenario every time you feed your pet cat, then I don't know what is. These furry, loud, and cute menace of a furball is one of the best home companions anyone could have. One of the most wonderful mysteries of the world is how a person do not wake up one day thinking they want a cat. Every cat person were not a cat person at birth. Most people, when looking for a companion or pet, will most likely to incline on adopting dogs, since they are the friendliest companions, every homeowner could have. So how does one adopt a cat? Last year, a famous personality online coined the term, "Cat Distribution System", which pertains to how people do not adopt a cat, instead, it adopts you. Most people don't like cats until one of these creatures enter into their lives uninvited, and slowly turns your world upside down, in a good way, of course. They always come uninvited, unexpected, and some in the weirdest ways in your life. No one is complaining though, because these lovely creatures were unique and loveable on their own way. It is also guaranteed that if you start owning a cat, you could never get enough of them, and they will keep coming at your doorstep until they take over your whole life.

The cat distribution system seemed funny at first glance, but the ancient world once believed that these creatures were connected to a higher dimensions and other worldly beings, hence instead of choosing them, they choose their own human companion. It is also believed that cats will come to your life, when you needed them the most. Their purrs also have healing capabilities, and their silly antics will surely light up anyone's day. These ancient beliefs, whether true or not, could not take away the fact that these adorable, furry, and intelligent companions will surely take over your heart and your home. Once you have been chosen by the cat distribution system, it will surely change your life for the better.
