In the daily events in school, the teachers are too preoccupied with various concerns. These things are not for themselves but for the benefit of the learners that they educate five days a week.

Primarily, the learner's sense of belongingness and connection to school is essential. The teacher ensures that the learner feels that he or she belongs to the class. Likewise, the learner must be connected to the people in the school, being part of the big family.

The foundation for academic success of a child is necessary. This means that the teacher is really leading the child to quality learning. The teacher is really concerned on the child's acquisition of basic skills which are necessary before going to further learning.

It is expected that a learner must have increased cooperation and engagement in the class. Having an active participation during class interaction is a great picture of productive teaching-learning process. The teacher really motivates the child to be more participative in discussions.

Inclusive school climate is part of the teacher's concerns for learners. This connotes that the teacher welcomes everybody in the class regardless of their uniqueness. Individual differences are inevitable and should be appreciated.

The social and emotional learning of a child must be realized. The teacher leads the child into being sociable and emotionally adjusted. Make him or her understand the importance of peers and the tolerance in various things.

It is needed to have the improved student outcomes as their accomplishments. The teachers aim to yield better outcomes in the performances of the learners in various school tasks and activities.

A teacher must teach the value building of a harmonious relationship with peers. The learners must be taught on building friendships with their classmates. The teacher even teaches them to establish good relationship with different kinds of people.

Creating a positive learning environment for schoolchildren is a must. This means that learners must enjoy their stay in the school. A positive learning environment is relative to this matter.

The students deserve respect. These young people must be treated with honor and compassion. They should be given utmost understanding for their distinct personalities.

It is great to learn that all the mentioned things are in the minds of teachers for they lead to learner's benefits and advantages.
