Students need to be motivated to learn and the teacher plays an essential role to persuade them to do better in their academic activities in school. Teachers must be equipped with the necessary skills of motivating the learners.

Acting as role model. To motivate the students to study effectively, a teacher must act as a model. The teacher may be able to augment his or her motivating power when he or she models admirable attitudes, behaviors, and abilities in school.

Getting along with students. Being more relatable and approachable would be more inspiring. The teacher should get along well with students. Applying camaraderie and building strong ties would improve the motivation of a teacher and would make students feel comfortable in studying.

Use examples to inspire. The teacher may use people, places, things or situations to be able to inspire. In this way, the motivating ability of the teacher is being manifested. With the examples given by the teacher, the students find inspiration and at the same time attain learning.

Utilize active activities. The teacher may devise various activities that are vital in stimulating the students to learn and be productive. These activities are designed by teachers and their creativity and innovation are also shown.

Set goals. As a teacher, in order to augment your motivation ability, you need to set goals. Have priorities and set specific targets and objectives. With the given plans as related to the goals, the teacher is able to attain the ability to motivate the students.

Apply appropriate assessments. They are ways to produce better academic performance among students. It is important for a teacher to make suitable tests to measure learning. When appropriate assessments are given and it suited the learners' ability, then the motivation ability of a teacher is improved.

Employ praise and recognition. A teacher may augment his or her motivation trough expressing praise and recognition. This means that the students are well-motivated by teachers when they appreciate and recognize the efforts of learners.

With the aforementioned ways the teacher's motivation will be augmented. leading to better learning and results among students.
