

MULTITASKING AMONG TEACHERS

by:

Ruth Erika C. Gersaniva

Teacher II, St. Ma. Virginia P. Leonzon Memorial Integrated School

In this era of digitalization that is considered a fast-paced generation, the teachers also evolve in terms of the tasks that they do and the way to perform them. Significantly, they do more to serve the learners well and to give justice to the role of a modern educator in this contemporary setting.

Multitasking is positively connotated as doing several things for the benefit of the educational clientele and stakeholders. It is an altruistic action that manifests productive undertakings to address the needs of the people around and to perform the duties competently and effectively.

It is a test of one's capability to hurdle challenges in the teaching profession, and it is at the same time attaining professional and personal growth as a teacher and as a public servant. This equates to the teacher to use his or her talents, skills, abilities, and creativity to perform several tasks.

In this modern time, multitasking is highly regarded as a notable skill. Doing more than one thing at a time is a sign of peak productivity. It is inevitable nowadays, most especially among teachers, because things happen so fast and there are things to be done right away. This does not mean that the quality of work is lessened instead; it shows how teachers address things on time.

Taken affirmatively, multitasking among teachers would raise efficiency. This is where teachers practice time management and balance in work. This is where the teachers utilize their full potentials to accomplish several things in a minimum of time.

Moreover, multitasking has become a strategy to handle several tasks, which is evident in the teaching profession. Teachers indeed have an array of daily responsibilities in school and that they cannot avoid but to perform them all as much as they can. Considered an advantage, it shows how progressive and attentive teachers are in their duties.

In any educational institution, to have teachers who can multitask is indeed precious. This could save time, money, and effort. This could also show how efficient and fruitful the teachers in their every work. Multitasking commands higher productivity and better reaction to the completion of different tasks. This entails the embracing of one's job and to pour dedication and commitment into the attainment of varied things in school or in any workplace.

Truly, multitasking is a sort of self-motivation to pursue and continue with our duties and responsibilities in school to serve people better and faster. Thus, teachers for being superb in this aspect. It is said to be the new way of working and fulfilling your job.

References:

Why our teachers are multitasking geniuses. <https://blog.linways.com/why-our-teachers-are-multitasking-geniuses/>

Panya Thongnin, P, Wongwanich S. and Piromsombat, C. (2013). Multi-Task Integration as a Strategy for Improving Teacher Performance and Student Learning.

Impact of multitasking on teachers' performance in public elementary schools.

https://www.researchgate.net/publication/377142583_Impact_of_multitasking_on_teachers'_performance_in_public_elementary_schools

Benefits of multitasking.

<https://www.iberdrola.com/talent/multitasking#:~:text=Benefits%20of%20multitasking&text=Being%20quicker%20and%20more%20efficient,Better%20reaction%20to%20complex%20tasks.>

Are There Benefits of Multitasking?

<https://appliedpsychologydegree.usc.edu/blog/benefits-of-multitasking>