

PREPARING FOR LIFE FROM THE PERSPECTIVE OF KINDERGARTEN

by:

Roda S. Soriano

Teacher II, Sta. Rosa Elementary School

When it comes to education, early childhood education must have been carrying the biggest burden to a preschool development. This is regarded as the beginning package for a preschool to become ready at school. We may observe that in a typical setup, each kindergarten first day most of the time in class, children are crying and asking or seeking someone to look after them, which is commonly referred to as anxiousness about being alone.

This situation makes sense when getting ready for life. Everyone experiences separation anxiety. Imagine that for a child, everything that is familiar to us will one day be very different like thoughts and emotions. When we are able to let go of the things that are known and routine to us, we take action to make improvements. We learned how to take chances. Considering it from the viewpoint of a Kindergarten, we don't always grieve at being separated from our guardian. All of us experience the time when we learn to adapt and welcome the change that is in front of us. We may act with flexibility once we have learned to accept life's facts.

Starting kindergarten may present many obstacles as well as opportunities for growth. It maybe either negative or good. When a child comes to see school as a place of safety, however, opportunities appear as sudden bursts of light. School is like the reality for adults. There are countless possibilities to learn and grow as individuals, so learn to fit in. We may face obstacles along the way, but in the eyes of any children, one tantrum is only a few there were no dissatisfaction when it came and went the other day.

Furthermore, playtime is essential in all kindergarten programs. Playtime creates new opportunities for everyone, as it can serve as a means of communication, building rapport, friendship, and education. Even for toddlers, play has a profound impact on their lives. It provides them with the confidence and it is included in every class because of the security and school child friendly. When routines are formed, children learn to express their abilities and intelligence. They gain self-confidence and learn to accept who they are. Similar to us, when we adopt to the environment we don't hesitate to express who we really are in order to love where we are and the people around us.

It's similar to a door opening for many. A secure location is similar to a haven and sanctuary where the key is comfort. The school must like that. Many people find solace there, but there are also endless lessons to impart.

It's true that having a childlike perspective is timeless and should be used consistently that we must be reminded of. Keep in mind that a child may view life as an easy lemon.

Generally speaking, simplifying the world around us is always a good idea.

References:

<https://blog.globalindianschool.org/role-of-kindergarten-in-preparing-children-for-future>
<https://www.firstthingsfirst.org/resources/kindergarten-readiness/>
<https://www.beginlearning.com/parent-resources/kindergarten-readiness/>