Teachers have a variety of functions in their students' lives, and it's really hard to play these parts. For the benefit of our students, teachers must fulfill these essential duties. First, we take on the role of our students' second parents. In order for them to grow into better people and contributing members of society, we must make sure that we are able to teach them the teachings they needed to learn in school as well as appropriate behavior and etiquette. Teachers also have the responsibility to help students develop their whole personalities in addition to teaching them knowledge.

At school, we also take on the role as their older siblings. We must respect students as if they were our own siblings. Playing with them in order to have fun and learn also makes them comfortable when they talk about their own experiences. As their teachers, we are their companions, particularly during difficult times in their lives. In their worst moments, we also serve as an adviser or counselor. Making our students feel loved and cared for requires us to be sensitive to their feelings.

Being a part of my students' journeys makes me proud as a teacher when they succeed in life. As a teacher, I feel fulfilled and contented when I see people realize their planned dreams since I have contributed to their development. Because we teach our students life lessons that they can use to teach other kids when they grow up, we teachers are also heroes. Their future development will be impacted by the lessons they receive. I am glad, content, proud, and appreciative of my students for paying close attention in class and for adhering to all the rules that will help them succeed in life. It is very amazing to watch them follow the correct course.

Being a teacher also includes imparting life lessons to our students. Teaching children, the proper behavior will help them develop into contributing members of society. We ought to support them constantly and steer them toward a brighter future. Just letting our students know that we are always available to them will give them the impression that they are in capable hands.

In the eyes of our students, we are also physicians and nurses. Caring for them when they're ill and showing them the same unconditional love as if they were our own children. Whatever our job as educators may be, what sets us apart is guiding students in the correct direction. One of our greatest accomplishments as educators is witnessing their success. We have the power to mold, create, and influence the lives of our students.
