

SCHOOL COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIP

by:

Rusell Alden R. Mangalindan

Special Education Teacher I, Bataan High School for the Arts

By partnering with schools, communities may provide children and families with an intentional, improved, and supported academic, social, and emotional health experience in the school environment and other local agencies and community-based locations. School-community partnerships are crucial to the success of educational institutions because they address the requirements of staff, families, and students beyond what is normally provided by the school. Community partners gain from their connections with schools in return, including knowledge of the schools' inclusive culture.

Skool Loop (2025) defines school community partnerships as the growth of a cooperative connection between a school and its community. These collaborations are essential to developing a caring and encouraging atmosphere for learners. They also provide schools access to local resources and knowledge to enhance student welfare, fundraising, and educational quality. It is critical that school communities intentionally cultivate partnerships with local companies, community groups, parents, and other members of the community. In order to provide a conducive learning environment that encourages student learning and achievement, school-community collaborations are essential. These collaborations provide schools access to many tools, knowledge, and assistance that may help them meet the needs of their families and children. Better attendance, academic achievement, and general well-being result from a complete approach to education made possible by a linked school community, which also boosts parental participation and helps children's intellectual, social, and emotional growth. Building successful schools that satisfy the needs of students, faculty, and the larger community requires community collaboration.

Partnerships between schools and the community may help schools fulfill the needs of state and federal education standards while also giving children a better education today. Collaborations may offer both financial and non-financial help (Blair, n.d). Communities in Schools give kids access to tools that support their academic success. The community may be helpful in a world that is constantly changing and where instructors are under increasing pressure to ensure learners reach high standards of excellence.

References:

Blair, S., C. (n.d). What are the benefits of school and community partnerships? Retrieved on April

02, 2025, from

https://socialsci.libretexts.org/Courses/Fresno_City_College/Education_30%3A_Introduction_to_Education_\(Perez\)/08%3A_Effective_Schools/8.04%3A_What_are_the_benefits_of_school_and_community_partnerships/08%3A_Effective_Schools/8.04%3A_What_are_the_benefits_of_school_and_community_partnerships)

Skool Loop (2025) The Benefits of School Community Partnerships. Retrieved on April 02, 2025, from <https://skoolloop.com/news-items/the-benefits-of-school-community-partnerships/>