

EMPOWERING PEOPLE

by:

James William V. Santos

Teacher III, Orani National High School Parang-Parang

The people comprising the school are the prime movers of the institution. The success of the school lies on them and not only with one person. That is why there is an ardent need to empower them for them to grow and thrive. There are several ways on to make your people empowered.

Know their worth is necessary. As a school leader, you are expected to have a background of the abilities, skills, or talents of your personnel. It is through this way that you distinguish their notable traits or characteristics. When they are recognized with their worth as workers that they feel their value and eventually become empowered in their own rights.

Boost their morale to the fullest is a good practice. Amid challenges in school brought by voluminous workloads, the school leader should be instrumental in increasing the self-esteem of every worker. Having self-esteem is vital in producing quality outputs in work. People who are confident yield best products and brilliant turnouts in the workplace.

Motivate their interests to soar higher. A good school leader should be the source of inspiration. This is to motivate their utmost inclinations to continue reaching productivity and success in their work or profession. People have different interests and if these will be used for the benefit of the entire organization then they will be fruitful. If they are supported with their undertakings, they will continue to shine, thus become empowered.

Expose them to worthwhile activities. Employees love to be trusted by their superiors in embarking to various activities like what they have in school. Given additional responsibilities, these people are empowered to share what they have in mind and to execute their abilities to be dynamic in nature. People are empowered if they are doing worthwhile things.

Develop their leadership potentials is meaningful. School leaders should create leaders within his group. It is a good sign that you are happy to produce future leaders, and this is indeed more rewarding. Shaping the lives and directions of prospective leaders for the benefit of learners is truly worthy. It is just creating a legacy for the common good.

Empowering your people is not a threat to your leadership, but instead you develop images from your own perspectives. It is an indication of altruism, for as a school leader you let the people to prosper and enjoy a positive culture.

References:

The Ultimate Guide to Maximizing Teacher Empowerment in Your School.

<https://educationwalkthrough.com/5-ways-to-maximize-teacher-empowerment-in-your-school/>

Empowering Teacher Leadership: Pioneering Educational Equity and Improvement.

<https://www.elmhurst.edu/blog/empowering-teacher-leadership-pioneering-educational-equity-improvement/>

Empowering teachers as leaders: the impact of teacher-led learning. <https://www.ei-ie.org/en/item/29228:empowering-teachers-as-leaders-the-impact-of-teacher-led-learning>

depedbataan.com
The Official Website of DepED Division of Bataan